Snoqualmie Ridge unveils new homes

Snoqualmie—Visit Snoqualmie Ridge this weekend to learn more about its newest neighborhood, Silent Creek, with its Craftsman-inspired home designs nestled among towering trees, community trails and preserved greenbelts.

At this weekend's grand opening, visitors can stop by the Snoqualmie Ridge Information Center for free coffee and cinnamon rolls and for a map of the community.

Priced from the mid $300,000's and ranging in size from 2,100 to 2,800 square feet, the 43 Silent Creek homes at Snoqualmie Ridge offer four new, single-family home designs with 3-4 bedrooms, luxurious master suites, timeless hardwood flooring and gourmet kitchens with stainless steel appliances. Built by CamWest, these homes reflect the latest in design, cutting edge technology, exquisite detail and quality craftsmanship.

Tucked away in the quiet city of Snoqualmie, the community is only 10 minutes from Issaquah, 20 minutes from Bellevue and 30 minutes from downtown Seattle. Residents love being located next door to mountain biking, hiking and skiing at Snoqualmie Pass, while still having an easy commute to work on Interstate 90.

Snoqualmie Ridge astounds visitors with its panoramic views of Mt. Si and the Cascade Mountain Range. The 1,340-acre community features more than 500 acres of permanent open space, including 20 miles of hiking and biking trails, community parks, a nature preserve and the Pacific Northwest's only Jack Nicklaus-designed TPC golf course.

The more than 1,000 residents at Snoqualmie Ridge enjoy living in a community that reflects their active lifestyles. The community integrates its vast open space with single-family homes, condominiums, town homes, apartments, a business park and a 10-acre retail plaza. The variety of landscapes and home styles resembles the charm of traditional, established Seattle neighborhoods—with front porches, pedestrian-friendly sidewalks, neighborhood parks and narrow streets.
